ABOUT THE BLOG

Thanks for your interest in So Well, So Woman! Founded in 2018, So Well, So Woman strives to tackle topics, stigmas and controversies related to all things wellness & woman! The content here is fun and fearlessly feminine, but also trustworthy, reliable and resourceful.

If you work in the health industry and have an interest in contributing your voice to the reproductive, sexual, relationship and mental health issues that young women are facing growing up in today's culture, feel free to get in touch.

KATE HARVESTON

Women's Health Writer

Kate Harveston is the writer and editor of So Well, So Woman. Originally from Williamsport, Pennsylvania, she holds a degree in Professional Writing. After graduating college, she immediately started working on breaking into the exciting world of online journalism.

You may remember Kate from her former political blog, Only Slightly Biased (founded 2014, since closed). After covering politics for several years, Kate discovered her truest passion lies in discussing women's health and healthcare issues.

So began the life of So Well, So Woman! Being a millennial women's health writer in today's day and age, Kate strives to bring a unique voice to the reproductive, sexual, relationship and mental health issues that young women are facing growing up in today's culture and political climate.
